Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am not in favor of the current Microsoft anti-trust settlement. I think Microsoft got off too easy. Considering Microsoft's reach and power given its tremendous wealth the company never admits fault. If the company had admitted some responsibility for its actions in trying to create a monopoly climate for browsers and related products. As I stated earlier Microsoft did financial punish those who spoke out against the company or supported platforms using other browsers. I think Microsoft should be forced to go back to court or work out a settlement that definitely prevents similar actions in the future backed up by really stiff penalties or fines.
